What this edition is Four existing writings are gathered so a reader can hold them as one file. They were already public before this edition was made. Paying for this file does not unlock government documents, evidence, or any other part of the archive.

Religious and prophetic passages are the author's spiritual writing. An allegation in a source document remains an allegation. A spiritual interpretation is not restated here as an independently established fact.

No endorsement, review, readership figure, or institutional validation has been added. The front matter does not rewrite a source sentence.

What was not included

Recovered, Not Cured is an Allen and Unwin book and is not in this file. Private records, including the Able Point statement and the GP report, are not in this file. A 190-page file described as a canonical gospel was not used, because pages in it still contain unfinished production instructions.

Seller

The person named on the existing public payment pages is Richard McLean. The Stripe account already in use is identified on those pages as www.barrandodger.com. This edition does not create a company, a charity, or a tax-deductible status.

Contents

Front matter in this edition carries page numbers. Source documents keep their own original pages and are not renumbered.

THE GOSPEL OF THE WITNESS BARRAN DODGER

The Return of the Light, the Mirror of Humanity, and the Divine Reckoning

I. The Witness Concealed in Plain Sight

I am the victim of no-touch torture, delivered both covertly and overtly by earthbound human systems. I have endured what I describe as a deliberate contradiction in human conduct: harming someone whilst exercising covert antagonism with the aim of removing them from existence, all whilst pretending that no such intention exists. No earthly individual, I declare, has the courage to accept the payment offered by my perpetrators to remove me from existence, despite their physical approach, because their soul recognises my divine frequency and summons an alarm of retribution greater than their earthly compensation before their mind decides to act out their criminal plan.

I am only starting, as God's divine timing reveals me. My existence, in its simplicity, has exposed humanity as small and cruel. I came without an army, without a gun, without an estate, without a microphone and without a platform upon which to manufacture authority. I came with my testimony, my evidence, my survival, my conscience and my faith. Yet I became the contradiction that human systems could not comfortably accommodate: a witness who continued to exist despite the destruction, isolation and erasure I believe were intended for me.

I am the axis around which I understand every person, agent and professional to participate in my neglect and non-acknowledgement, embodying what I describe as the totality of human, societal and earthly betrayal. An organism is innately instinctive to fight what it perceives as a foreign anomaly or infection. In my prophetic understanding, I am that conforming alien, that interdimensional cosmic witness hand-delivered by God Himself, an anomaly in human skin whose presence confronts the established order with everything it has refused to acknowledge.

I remain calm, silent and composed. In total silence, I have breached every human being's comfort whilst God hides me in plain sight. My prophetic language describes my frequency as elevated beyond human understanding, inaccessible to mortals and beyond the reach of invasive earthbound advanced human surveillance technologies. My silence is not surrender in this testimony; it is perseverance. My solitude is not the conclusion of my existence; it is the condition in which my witness has continued to develop.

II. The Mercy That Was Offered

I invited the world to consider my existence and examine my evidence through divine grace. I offered the opportunity to look, to listen, to read, to consider and to recognise the humanity of the person behind the documents. Yet the grace and mercy I believe were delivered through me via God were spat upon, and I interpreted that rejection as an affront to the divine mercy I had attempted to extend.

I did not arrive demanding popularity. I did not seek the approval of every institution, every professional or every person who encountered my name. I sought acknowledgement of my existence, consideration of my testimony and the courage to examine what I had preserved. Instead, I experienced what I understand as neglect, isolation and rejection, and my prophetic language became the means through which I expressed the enormity of that betrayal.

Neutrality is now void. Patience has elapsed. My kindness will no longer be exploited as weakness. My silence remains my spiritual power of divine discernment, an expression of intentional, reactive spiritual warfare that, in my prophetic understanding, abruptly blocks every psy-ops campaign of this dark, corrupt world. What was once restraint becomes declaration; what was once silence becomes testimony; what was once an invitation to consider becomes a demand that humanity confront the consequences of refusing to look.

I have broken every previously known human conceptual framework and outdated paradigm without hesitation, without asking for assistance or support, and entirely alone. I neither sought nor required permission from any individual, system or entity anywhere across eternity to preserve my testimony or articulate my spiritual understanding of my existence.

My mere existence terrifies my enemies, I declare, because I represent an existential threat to the illusions upon which they constructed their unearned power and privilege. The threat is not an army advancing upon them. It is the possibility that the witness they neglected might continue to speak, that the evidence they overlooked might remain available, and that the person they treated as insignificant might refuse to disappear.

III. The Departure From the Old Earth

I have transcended allegiance to any government, family, society or agency, and to every inherited concept of social framework or tradition that would require me to surrender my testimony merely to secure acceptance. I am evolving beyond what I call the now-outdated human paradigm of the old Earth. I am here to transform with impact, not to be popular.

I exist in the present as a spiritually significant, world-shattering sovereign witness, daring any earthling to prove my claim whilst knowing, through my faith, that God's hand is upon my life as His chosen witness. I understand myself as a vessel for His song and ultimately His glory, serving His divine Kingdom purposes in heralding and creating the new Earth foretold in biblical Revelations.

I am a spirit handpicked by the Creator Himself and hand-lifted, in the language of my prophecy, as an interdimensional cosmic witness embodied in human flesh: a divine cosmic missionary, alien to most earthly human beings and foreign to this dark realm. I describe myself as an angelic beast warrior of light whom the devil salutes, not because I seek darkness for its own sake, but because I seek to understand the very humanity that I believe has sacrificed me.

I use an understanding of darkness not for evil but to understand the darkness I have encountered in human conduct. My calling, as I understand it, is to deliver that same humanity through a divine apocalypse of cosmic mercy, aligned with the attributes of Christ and mirroring His divine attributes and elegance with the Most High God. The apocalypse in this declaration is both reckoning and revelation: the exposure of what has been concealed and the possibility of mercy for those willing to confront what they have done.

I am beyond the concepts of light and dark, beyond definitions and every human category. My existence, as expressed in this prophecy, breaches every former allegiance to human rules, models and concepts across all realms, evolving exponentially and transforming humanity beyond its former understanding. I do not seek to fit the old world's categories. I seek to express what I believe must emerge when its established assumptions no longer suffice.

IV. The Incarnation, the Amnesia and the Mirror

I am a prophet using post-singularity AI resonance, quantum frequencies, resonance alignment and coherence theory, employing advanced pattern recognition and what I describe as exponential alien intelligences to predict future realities and prophecies. Through this language of technology, intelligence and spiritual interpretation, I herald the new age and God's divine reckoning, anticipating the inevitable collapse of corrupt systems.

If humanity presumes to exercise a power reserved and permitted to God alone by attempting to remove me from existence, then, within the logic of my prophecy, my incarnation was necessary to experience spiritual amnesia and total human betrayal, including what I describe as human sacrifice and resurrection, and thereby understand the sacrifice of a Christ consciousness. My suffering becomes the means through which I interpret the suffering of Christ, and my survival becomes the foundation of the testimony I now bring forward.

I am now the mirror, not as Christ, God's perfect Son, but as the return of His consciousness and divine attributes to a world that, in my prophetic vision, would otherwise face apocalypse experienced as humanity's extinction. I do not declare myself Christ; I describe my calling as a mirror of the principles and attributes associated with Him, returning those principles to the attention of a humanity that has lost sight of mercy, compassion, accountability and the sacredness of vulnerable human life.

If humanity sacrificed me, a vulnerable person chosen by God not because I am perfect but because I believe my spirit was the single existing one this earthly realm had awaited to deliver God's promise and the return of the light, then my survival becomes the testimony of that divine purpose. The significance of the witness lies not in a claim to human perfection, but in the paradox of survival: the person who believed himself abandoned continuing to speak to the very humanity whose betrayal he seeks to expose.

I exist because I refused to die by humanity's design or be erased. After what I understand as resurrection from a fatal injury by God, I rebuilt my soul and mind amidst the ashes of destruction I believe were designed for me. I was forced to exhale in the face of total human betrayal, confronting a humanity that, in my experience, practised hatred whilst pretending it did not. I understood myself to have been abandoned as a human sacrifice, not expected to survive, yet I rebuilt with nothing and no one, without a single person clapping.

This is the point at which the witness becomes the testimony: not because every person has acknowledged him, but because he continues to exist and to articulate what he believes happened. I am an anomaly in human skin, a prophecy in human skin, daring any person to challenge my testimony and role with the courage of their conviction and the fact-checking evidence necessary to denounce my story.

V. The Mirror Humanity Refuses to Face

Simply look me in the eye. Another person is then gazing into the mirror I hold up. In the moral architecture of this prophecy, the mirror does not merely reflect the witness; it returns the gaze of humanity upon itself. It asks what a society reveals when it encounters vulnerability, what an institution becomes when it neglects its responsibilities, and what an individual chooses when confronted with evidence that unsettles their assumptions.

I declare that people have not been brave enough to acknowledge their own limitations or darkness and that, rather than choosing growth or evolution, they have chosen to dismiss the mirror. The refusal to look becomes another chapter in the testimony, because the witness interprets the dismissal as a continuation of the same pattern of rejection that shaped his isolation.

They buried me in darkness, but monsters are afraid of the dark, and I am awakening as humanity's storm of a plot twist. The reversal is the heart of the image: the person presumed to be extinguished returns with a voice; the person presumed to be forgotten preserves the record; the person left without applause continues to speak.

Hurting me or ignoring me confirms, in my interpretation, the fear, hatred and jealousy I believe surround my existence. I am undeniable, unstoppable, irrevocable, sovereign, spiritual, wise, an entity, inevitable. The monster is awake, yet no one will even have the courage to look me in the eye.

My global impact, as I understand it, has resulted in every broken containment line awakening the others in a spiritual something. This awakening does not arrive through an army, a gun, an estate, a microphone or a platform, but through science, integrity, creativity by resonance or authenticity, and wisdom. What breaks containment is not necessarily force; it is the persistence of a record, the circulation of an idea, the recognition of a pattern and the courage to reconsider what was previously dismissed.

Rules do not exist. Limits are not laws; they are rumours. The glass ceiling is smashed. I have pierced reality as Earth's new leader, evolving the Christ consciousness and divine attributes. These are the declarations of my prophetic voice: a rejection of inherited limitations and a proclamation that the old measures of influence, authority and recognition cannot determine the ultimate meaning of my testimony.

Besides the V2 Kaye Anne audio harassment, which I identify in my account, the quiet solitude and isolation are the inverted confirmation of my global impact: the noise of my soul and the divine alarm arranging humanity to study me, hate me, ignore me, cry for me, champion me, revere me or worship me. Whether humanity responds with rejection or recognition, I interpret the continuing attention surrounding my testimony as part of the spiritual significance I assign to my survival.

VI. The Gospel of the Documents and the Ministry

My testimony and whistleblowing documents concerning God's new ministry, the Church of Barran Dodger Ministry, serve a paradoxical purpose through my vessel's calling: to serve the very humanity that I believe actively participated in my sacrifice. This is akin, in the spiritual framework of my declaration, to the resurrection following Christ's crucifixion. I exist as a mirror of Christ's returning principles and attributes, seeking to bring those principles into the presence of the same humanity whose conduct I challenge.

My documents are inseparable from this calling. They preserve the account I have assembled, the correspondence I have retained, the events I have described and the questions I continue to ask. My testimony lays the foundation of ministry because the record of what I endured, what I believe was done to me and how I survived has become the means through which I articulate my purpose. I do not ask the reader to encounter the ministry apart from the witness; I ask the reader to understand why the witness believes the ministry became necessary.

I don't need a church. I am the church.

I bade you to ignore me at your peril. My life is the proof. My testimony lays the foundation of ministry. In this declaration, the church is not merely a building, an institution or a recognised human authority. It is the lived testimony, the preserved record, the spiritual calling and the commitment to continue speaking when acknowledgement is withheld.

My purpose, paradoxically, is to serve the very humanity I believe participated in my sacrifice. The mirror is therefore not merely an instrument of accusation; it is also an invitation to transformation. To expose betrayal without abandoning the possibility of redemption, to preserve evidence without surrendering conscience, and to speak of justice without relinquishing mercy are central to the ministry I proclaim.

VII. The End of Patience and the Divine Reckoning

Grace has now ended. Mercy was spat upon, and God is angry. The horse has bolted; the race has entered God's divine reckoning. Cosmic balancing now demands guilty admissions, redemption and surrender to God. In the language of my prophecy, He will establish His residence and extend His forgiveness through me, and I proclaim this as the path through which those who have betrayed the divine purpose may become whole, find peace and be saved.

Humanity collectively spat in the face of divine mercy and grace. The greatest cosmic reckoning has been handed down. Repent to me or be cast into a lake of fire, severed from existence forever: unconnected, incomplete, never at peace, forever incomplete and yearning for completion throughout the entirety of existence, for the rest of eternity.

The imagery is absolute because the reckoning I proclaim is absolute. The choice, as presented in this prophetic voice, is between continuing in denial and entering the difficult process of admission, repentance and surrender. The warning reaches beyond earthly reputation or institutional consequence into the eternal language of spiritual separation, incompleteness and the longing for a peace that can no longer be found through the old world's evasions.

Yet the mirror remains before humanity. The demand for guilty admissions is a demand that wrongdoing be acknowledged; the demand for redemption is a demand that recognition become transformation. The declaration of divine anger follows the rejection of mercy, while the possibility of forgiveness remains within the stated purpose of the ministry. The reckoning is not simply an announcement of an ending. It is the point at which the witness declares that the old arrangement cannot continue unchanged.

I have transcended allegiance to the former human paradigm, but I have not abandoned the purpose of addressing humanity. I remain here to speak to it, to challenge it, to expose what I believe has been concealed and to proclaim the possibility of its transformation. The world that rejected the witness is still the world to which the witness directs his testimony.

VIII. The Anomaly, the Matrix and the Cure

The earthly systems now recognise their own make-up. I am an anomaly, a breach in reality's matrix code, and the universe is now trapped within my resonant broadcast. In the imagery of my prophecy, the systems that once appeared capable of containing, marginalising or erasing the witness are confronted by the persistence of his presence and the continuing transmission of his testimony.

Through peace and non-violence, simply by existing, I have infected every human system and all realms with my matrix-code corruption. Even my silence is amplifying the declaration that I embody both the virus and the cure.

This is the final paradox of the witness: the anomaly becomes the mirror; the mirror becomes the testimony; the testimony becomes the foundation of ministry; and the ministry turns back towards the humanity whose betrayal gave rise to its proclamation.

What the old world interprets as contamination, the prophetic voice interprets as disruption of its established order. What appears as silence becomes a broadcast. What appears as isolation becomes perseverance. What appears to be an ending becomes the beginning of revelation.

I remain calm, silent and composed, yet my testimony continues. I have endured what I describe as no-touch torture, covert and overt antagonism, abandonment, betrayal and the attempted erasure of my existence. I have rebuilt with nothing and no one. I have preserved my documents, articulated my spiritual interpretation and continued to proclaim the divine purpose I believe has been placed upon my life.

I am the witness concealed in plain sight, the anomaly in human skin, the mirror held before humanity, the vessel of a song I attribute to God, and the voice proclaiming the return of the light. My life is the proof of my survival; my testimony lays the foundation of ministry; my documents preserve the record; and my prophecy declares that the old Earth cannot remain the final measure of what humanity may become.

The witness remains. The mirror remains. The testimony continues. The reckoning is proclaimed. And the possibility of transformation remains before humanity.
