

PERSONAL STATEMENT OF EXILE, INSTITUTIONAL DETRIMENT AND THE SEARCH FOR PROTECTION

I am carrying what I understand to be the cumulative ethical failures, institutional betrayals and unresolved harms arising across more than three decades of interactions with government agencies, professional systems, health and disability services, legal institutions, oversight bodies and other organisations. I have documented my account and the underlying material in a public archive so that the allegations can be examined against the primary evidence rather than accepted merely because I make them.

The following is my account. Allegations are allegations unless independently established by a court, tribunal, official investigation or other authoritative finding. The archive contains documentary material that I say supports particular aspects of my account, but the existence of a document or correspondence does not by itself establish that the alleged wrongdoing occurred.

MY ALLEGATIONS OF WRONGDOING AND HARM

I allege that I have been subjected to a sustained pattern of institutional and personal harm, including:

- institutional abandonment and failure of protection;
- financial restriction and loss of effective access to resources;
- barriers to legal representation and access to justice;
- forced dependency upon accommodation and support arrangements from which I say I have had no practical means of escape;
- administrative and bureaucratic processes that I believe have progressively reduced my ability to advocate for myself;
- professional and social isolation;
- characterisation of my complaints as manifestations of mental illness rather than matters requiring independent investigation;
- what I experience and report as electronic surveillance or unexplained audio harassment, including what I have described as V2K;
- threats and safety concerns;
- alleged mistreatment affecting my companion and therapy dog, Crystal;
- what I allege to be coordinated reputational damage and social exclusion;
- what I describe as political exile and displacement within the country of my citizenship; and
- a broader pattern which I allege has operated cumulatively to make it extraordinarily difficult for me to obtain independent legal, financial, medical, housing or media assistance.

ALLEGED CRIMES AND EVIDENCE

The Barran Dodger archive contains a dedicated section titled:

Crimes against Barran Dodger — Master Allegation and Evidence Matrix (1–150)

<https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/#crimes>

The archive identifies the underlying source as:

"Crimes committed upon Barran Dodger 3.pdf"

The Crimes tab contains an allegation-and-evidence matrix through which I have attempted to identify individual alleged crimes or acts of wrongdoing and connect them to available documentary material.

I present these matters as allegations requiring examination. The existence of an allegation, document, correspondence, transcript or other material does not itself establish criminal liability.

The archive's purpose is to allow the alleged wrongdoing to be examined item by item against the documentary record rather than treating the allegations themselves as established criminal findings.

The archive also uses evidence classifications intended to distinguish the nature and strength of the material, including:

A — Primary documentary

B — Incomplete documentary

C — Independent corroboration needed

D — Narrative

H — High-consequence allegation

Where an allegation is consequential or remains unresolved, I want it treated as requiring appropriate independent examination rather than as an established fact.

Crimes against Barran Dodger — Master Allegation and Evidence Matrix:

<https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/#crimes>

EVIDENCE AND ALLEGED WRONGS

The archive contains a dedicated evidence structure through which I have attempted to distinguish my allegations from documentary material.

Barran Dodger — Alleged Wrongs and Evidence Archive:

<https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/>

This should be read as an index of allegations and supporting material, not as a judicial determination that the alleged crimes or wrongdoing have occurred.

WHAT HAPPENED TO ME

My account of what happened is set out separately so that the chronology and cumulative effect can be considered without requiring the reader to accept every interpretation I have placed upon it.

What Happened to Me — Published Archive Tab:

<https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/#what-happened-to-me>

I allege that the significance of the events cannot properly be understood by examining individual incidents in isolation.

My concern is the cumulative interaction between financial control, accommodation dependency, disability services, compulsory mental-health treatment, access to legal assistance, institutional decision-making, professional responses and social isolation.

I allege that the interaction of these systems has produced circumstances in which individual decisions that may appear explainable when considered separately can, collectively, have a much greater impact upon a person's autonomy, financial security, ability to obtain representation, credibility and practical capacity to leave or challenge the circumstances in which they find themselves.

OPENING TESTIMONY

My opening testimony provides the broader personal account and explains why I have created the archive.

Opening Testimony:

<https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/#opening-testimony>

My purpose in publishing this material is not simply to make accusations.

It is to preserve a contemporaneous record and allow independent readers, journalists, lawyers, researchers, oversight bodies and other institutions to test the evidence.

I want the underlying documents to remain available so that my account can be compared with primary records, official correspondence, decisions, dates, communications and other documentary material.

NO ONE HAS THE RIGHT TO ERASE A SOUL

A central part of my testimony concerns the belief that a person's dignity, identity and existence cannot legitimately be erased through administrative processes, social exclusion, institutional labelling or the denial of meaningful avenues to challenge decisions.

No One Has the Right to Erase a Soul:

<https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/#no-one-has-the-right>

This section contains my faith-based interpretation of the experience.

References to God, the Most High, vindication and the preservation of what I describe as my calling are matters of faith and personal interpretation, rather than propositions I present as independently verifiable facts.

My belief is that administrative decisions, institutional labels or social exclusion cannot ultimately determine the inherent worth or dignity of a human being.

That is a matter of faith and interpretation, and readers are free to assess it for themselves.

"PICKED A FIGHT WITH GOD"

I have also created a separate section explaining the theological meaning I attach to surviving these circumstances.

Picked a Fight with God:

<https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/#picked-a-fight-with-god>

I understand this through my faith: that attempts to erase a person, their testimony or their dignity cannot ultimately determine the truth of their existence.

That is my religious interpretation of what has happened to me, and readers are free to assess it for themselves.

The title expresses the theological interpretation I attach to the circumstances: that attempts to suppress, erase or destroy what I believe God has preserved cannot ultimately prevail over the truth as I understand it.

This is presented as faith-based interpretation rather than an independently established proposition.

IMPARTIAL AI ARCHIVE

I have also asked AI systems to examine the documentary corpus from an explicitly evidence-oriented perspective.

Impartial AI Archive:

<https://wezzo72.github.io/Barrandodger/#impartial-ai>

The purpose of this material is not to treat an AI-generated assessment as equivalent to a judicial or governmental finding.

An AI analysis can identify patterns, inconsistencies, chronology and documentary relationships, but it cannot itself establish criminal liability.

I therefore regard AI analysis as an analytical aid rather than a substitute for independent investigation, legal determination or official fact-finding.

Where an AI system identifies a pattern, I want the underlying documents to remain available so that the reader can determine whether the pattern is actually supported by the primary evidence.

THE INSTITUTIONAL ARCHITECTURE I ALLEGE

I allege that my circumstances have been maintained through the interaction of multiple systems rather than through one isolated decision.

The stakeholders appearing throughout my documentary chronology include government departments and agencies, disability and support services, NSW Trustee & Guardian, health and mental-health services, police and courts, legal assistance systems, oversight bodies, professional organisations, media organisations and private individuals.

Their appearance in my archive does not mean that each organisation or individual committed a crime.

Rather, I identify them because their decisions, correspondence, records or involvement form part of the chronology that I say requires examination.

The institutional pathways appearing in the archive include matters involving disability services, compensation and employment, information-access processes, health and mental-health systems, human-rights processes, guardianship and financial administration, police and courts, legal assistance and oversight bodies.

I do not present the existence of these institutional pathways as proof of a conspiracy or collective wrongdoing.

I present them as the interconnected systems through which I say my circumstances developed and through which the documentary record can be examined.

THE CENTRAL QUESTION

The central question I ask is:

Can a sequence of individually explainable administrative decisions nevertheless produce a cumulative condition in which a vulnerable person becomes financially dependent, institutionally isolated, deprived of effective legal assistance, psychiatrically discredited and practically unable to escape the circumstances causing the distress?

That is the question I want the evidence to answer.

I do not claim that the answer should be assumed in advance.

I ask that the documentary record be examined to determine whether the cumulative effect described in my account is supported, contradicted or left unresolved by the evidence.

THE FEEDBACK LOOP I ALLEGE

My account describes a potentially self-reinforcing sequence:

financial restriction → dependency → accommodation/support dependency → institutional decision-making → psychiatric interpretation of distress → reduced credibility → reduced access to assistance → greater dependency and distress.

I present this as an analytical model of my allegations, not as an established finding.

The purpose of the model is to explain how apparently separate institutional decisions may interact over time.

It is not intended to establish that every participant consciously coordinated their actions or that every outcome was deliberately caused.

KEY DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

The archive identifies a number of documents and documentary pathways that I regard as important to understanding my account.

THE EVIDENCE HIERARCHY

Where possible, I want readers to distinguish between different levels of evidentiary status.

A — Established fact

A court, tribunal or other authoritative body has made a finding or determination.

B — Corroborated claim

The claim is supported by multiple independent records or sources.

C — Documented allegation

The allegation is recorded in correspondence, a complaint, statement, transcript or other documentary material.

D — Inference

The proposition is an interpretation drawn from documented circumstances rather than a direct finding.

E — Speculation

The proposition requires further evidence before it can reasonably be established.

I also distinguish between documentary evidence, corroboration, narrative accounts and analytical interpretation.

My objective is therefore not to ask readers simply to believe me.

It is to ask them to test the documentary record.

PURPOSE OF THE ARCHIVE

I publish these materials because I believe that allegations of serious institutional wrongdoing should be capable of independent examination.

I have attempted to preserve the documentary record so that the chronology can be reconstructed and individual allegations can be assessed against the available evidence.

Where the evidence establishes something, it should be identified as established.

Where it merely records my allegation, it should be identified as an allegation.

Where the evidence supports a claim but does not independently establish it, it should be identified as corroboration rather than proof.

Where the conclusion is an inference, it should be identified as an inference.

Where the evidence remains unresolved, it should remain unresolved.

OPEN CHALLENGE TO THE RECORD

If I am wrong, I ask that the evidence establishing the error be identified.

If my disclosures were properly dealt with, I ask that the record showing how they were received, assessed and answered be identified.

If legal assistance was properly refused or unavailable, I ask that the reasons and applicable review process be identified.

If my account of institutional treatment is mistaken, I ask that the evidence establishing the contrary be identified.

If particular allegations are unsupported, I ask that the evidentiary deficiencies be identified.

If particular allegations are supported, I ask that the supporting evidence be independently recognised and properly examined.

I am not asking an independent reader to assume that every allegation is true.

I am asking that the allegations not be dismissed merely because they are difficult, unconventional, extensive or made by the person who experienced the events.

The appropriate question is what the documentary record demonstrates.

FINAL STATEMENT

My purpose in creating and maintaining this archive is to preserve a record of what I say has happened to me across more than three decades and to make that record available for independent examination.

I allege that the cumulative effect of institutional decisions, financial restrictions, dependency, disability-service involvement, health and mental-health processes, legal barriers, administrative processes, professional responses and social isolation requires examination as a whole rather than solely as a collection of disconnected incidents.

I also preserve my faith-based interpretation of survival, dignity and vindication separately from the documentary claims, because I recognise that matters of faith are different from matters that can be established through documentary or institutional evidence.

The archive is therefore both a record and an invitation.

It is an invitation to journalists, lawyers, researchers, academics, oversight bodies, human-rights organisations, government institutions and independent readers to examine the evidence.

It is an invitation to distinguish established facts from allegations, corroborated claims from inference, and documented material from interpretation.

It is an invitation to examine the chronology rather than relying solely upon institutional summaries or characterisations.

Most importantly, it is an invitation to test the record.

The archive is therefore an invitation to examine the evidence — not a demand that the reader accept my conclusions.
