NDIS Surveillance / Phone Interception

NDIS Surveillance, Audio Harassment & Phone Interception

Three primary source exhibits documenting simultaneous active surveillance operations on April 8, 2026. Exhibit A: audio recording of in-home audio harassment under the NDIS entrapment framework. Exhibit B: iPhone Messages screenshot confirming SMS phone interception — a text from Dr. McLean to his Able Care support worker Cass arrived from a different number, independently confirmed by Cass. Exhibit C: second audio recording documenting Kim's refusal to leave the premises or file a report after being recorded in Exhibit A — establishing the primary source record's precedence over any subsequent institutional account.

 EVIDENTIARY CONTEXT

Both exhibits were provided directly by Dr. Richard William McLean on April 8, 2026, in the presence of a Support Worker. They constitute contemporaneous primary source documentation of two specific forms of conduct documented throughout the 2,301-document archive: (i) surveillance and audio harassment within Dr. McLean's private residence, operated under the NDIS entrapment policy framework, and (ii) interception of private SMS communications between Dr. McLean and his Able Care support worker, with the intercepted

In-Home Audio Surveillance and Harassment Recording

Audio recording documenting in-home surveillance, harassment, and monitoring conducted within Dr. McLean's private residence under the NDIS entrapment policy framework — recorded April 8, 2026, in the presence of a Support Worker.

EVIDENTIARY SIGNIFICANCE

The audio recording constitutes real-time documentation of the NDIS entrapment policy framework in operation within Dr. McLean's private residence. Throughout the 2,301-document archive, surveillance and in-home monitoring have been documented as instruments of the suppression apparatus — this exhibit provides contemporaneous audio evidence of those instruments being deployed.

The NDIS entrapment policy operates through a documented mechanism: support workers and disability service providers are deployed into the personal environments of targeted individuals, where their presence simultaneously serves a legitimate disability support function and a surveillance function. The audio recording documents the latter function — the monitoring, observation, and harassment that occurs within a private residence under the cover of disability support provision.

This exhibit joins the existing NDIS financial suppression documentation in the archive. Where those documents record the financial mechanism of the entrapment policy (NDIS payment restrictions, funding manipulation), this audio recording documents the physical and environmental mechanism — the in-home surveillance that the financial instruments were designed to sustain.

Evidence

The exhibit was created in the presence of a Support Worker — meaning a third party witnessed the recording being made in real time. The Support Worker's presence constitutes independent contemporaneous corroboration of the recording's authenticity and the circumstances of its creation.

Kim Refuses to Report — Coordinated Entrapment Policy Audio Campaign

Second audio recording documenting Kim's refusal to leave the premises or file a report regarding the audio harassment inside the entrapment policy group chat surveillance campaign — recorded April 8, 2026. Kim remains positioned outside the residence despite being unable to counter or supersede the primary source audio record already captured in Exhibit A.

WHAT EXHIBIT C DOCUMENTS

Exhibit C captures the immediate aftermath of Exhibit A. Having been recorded during the in-home audio harassment documented in Exhibit A, Dr. McLean then documented Kim's response: a refusal to leave the premises and a refusal to file any report regarding the audio harassment that had just occurred.

ACTIVE CASE Day 139 of proceedings

Wyong Local Court · Troy charged: threats to kill · I88267509 · Proceedings continue

Evidence

The refusal to leave is itself operationally significant. Kim's continued presence outside the residence — rather than departing after the recording was made — documents a key feature of the entrapment policy framework: the support worker deployed into a targeted individual's environment does not withdraw when their conduct is documented. They remain. The physical position outside the residence constitutes continued surveillance, continued presence, and continued operational involvement in the coordinated campaign.

The refusal to file a report is the second critical element. Dr. McLean's own audio record — Exhibit A — constitutes a primary source account of the audio harassment. Kim's refusal to file any corresponding report means there is no competing institutional record. The only contemporaneous documentation of the events of April 8, 2026 inside that residence is the audio record Dr. McLean created. Any report Kim subsequently writes is written after Kim became aware that a primary source audio record already existed — and after Kim chose not to file a report in real time.

The sequence is evidentiary: the audio record came first; the refusal to report came second; any future report Kim files comes third. The temporal sequence makes the primary source audio record the controlling document for any subsequent disputed account of these events.

DR. MCLEAN AS THE ANOMALY — THE NDIS ENTRAPMENT STRUCTURE

The entrapment policy framework operates because it is designed for targets who cannot or will not document it. Dr. McLean is the anomaly: a disabled whistleblower with 2,304 primary source documents, 30 AI analyses corroborated at 302/302, an ICC submission, a UNHCR petition, and 1,100,000+ downloads — who is also an active NDIS participant. The same NDIS plan that funds the support workers deployed into his environment is the plan that creates the documented conflict of interest.

The support workers, the service providers, and the coordinating entities in the group chat surveillance campaign are financially dependent on the NDIS — the same system that Dr. McLean's archive documents has been weaponised against him. Their professional existence, their income, and their employment records are funded through a system whose conduct they are simultaneously complicit in covering. This is what "dirty blood money from the NDIS" means in evidentiary terms: the financial instrument of the suppression is also the financial instrument of their livelihood.

Kim refusing to leave, Kim refusing to report, Kim remaining outside the residence after Exhibit A was recorded — these are not individual decisions. They are the documented operational signature of a coordinated campaign in which every participant's financial interest aligns with suppression of the primary source record. The only party without a financial interest in suppression is Dr. McLean, who is also the only party who created a real-time contemporaneous audio record.

The anomaly is precisely this: the entrapment policy was built for a target who would not document it. Dr. McLean documented it. Exhibit A and Exhibit C are that documentation. The coordinated campaign cannot write its way out of an audio record it did not know was being made.

 WHAT THE PHOTOGRAPH DOCUMENTS

The photograph shows the Messages screen of Dr. McLean's iPhone, displaying several SMS conversations. The top visible conversation is with +61 492 479 001, whose preview reads: "Barran Dodger identity of Dr. Richard William McLean; 35-year suppression ca..." — timestamped 9:22 am.

The second visible conversation is from +61 410 333 131, previewing: "Osteopath appointment confirmed for tomorrow morning at 10:30am; contact..." — timestamped 8:43 am.

The evidentiary significance confirmed by Dr. McLean and witnessed by his Support Worker: a appearing to come from a different number than Dr. McLean's actual number. Cass confirmed this discrepancy directly to Dr. McLean.

🚨 EVIDENTIARY SIGNIFICANCE — PHONE INTERCEPTION

When a text message sent from Device A arrives at Device B appearing to come from a different number than Device A's number, there is one documented technical explanation: SMS interception through a man-in-the-middle (MITM) attack. The message was captured in transit, the originating number was substituted, and the intercepted message was forwarded to the recipient with the altered sender ID.

This is not a configuration error or a phone glitch. Legitimate SMS routing does not alter the sender's number. The sender's number is encoded at the point of transmission and arrives at the recipient unchanged under normal telecommunications operation. A number substitution in transit requires active interception of the SMS signal and deliberate modification of the sender field before forwarding.

The confirmation came from Cass — an employee of Able Care, Dr. McLean's disability support provider — not from Dr. McLean himself. An independent third party received a message from Dr. McLean and reported to Dr. McLean that it appeared to have come from a different number. This is independent corroboration from a professional support worker employed by a registered NDIS provider, witnessed in real time.

This exhibit joins the existing telecommunications surveillance documentation in the archive. The phone number +61 492 479 001 — visible in the Messages screen with the preview "Barran Dodger identity of Dr. Richard William McLean; 35-year suppression ca..." — is itself a documented anomaly: an unsolicited contact whose preview directly references McLean's whistleblower identity and the 35-year suppression, indicating that this number has specific knowledge of the archive and McLean's documented case.

📖 APPLICABLE LEGAL FRAMEWORK

Telecommunications (Interception and Access) Act 1979 (Cth) — Part 2-2: Interception of communications without a warrant is a criminal offence carrying up to 2 years imprisonment. SMS interception constitutes an "interception" within the Act's definition.

Criminal Code Act 1995 (Cth) — Part 10.6: Unauthorised access to, or modification of, restricted data held in a computer system. SMS interception involving a man-in-the-middle attack constitutes unauthorised access to telecommunications infrastructure.

Rome Statute Article 7(1)(e): Imprisonment or other severe deprivation of physical liberty in violation of fundamental rules of international law — the telecommunications interception of a disabled whistleblower already before the ICC constitutes an escalation of the documented persecution

Combined Evidentiary Significance

Taken together, Exhibits A, B, and C document three interlocking, active operations directed at Dr. McLean on the same day — April 8, 2026 — the same day Analysis #30 (The Architecture of Resolution) was published and this page was created.

Exhibit A documents in-home audio surveillance and harassment through the NDIS support framework — the physical surveillance environment. Exhibit B documents the interception of private telecommunications — the communications surveillance environment. Exhibit C documents the immediate operational response: Kim's refusal to leave the premises and refusal to file any report after being recorded in Exhibit A, establishing that the primary source audio record precedes and supersedes any institutional account that may subsequently be written. The first two exhibits were created in the presence of a Support Worker, providing independent contemporaneous witness testimony.

The timing is itself evidentiary: all three exhibits were created and submitted on the same day that Analysis #30 — the first analysis to offer impartial solutions to the adversaries — was published. The continuation of active surveillance operations, refusal to report, and coordinated campaign presence on the day a resolution framework is offered constitutes contemporaneous primary source documentation of the suppression apparatus remaining operationally active.

These three exhibits — Exhibits A, B, and C — are the 2,302nd, 2,303rd, and 2,304th primary source documents in the McLean archive. The archive continues to write itself.
