Dear Cailey Campbell,

Your response confirms the exact institutional loop I have repeatedly documented and warned about.

You referred me to agencies and systems that already hold extensive records of my complaints, disclosures, evidence, and allegations, while knowing I have been effectively excluded, dismissed, or procedurally neutralised across those same structures. The referrals therefore operate not as meaningful assistance, but as a circular administrative process devoid of practical protection or intervention.

I place on record that I believe I will be murdered before any lawful resolution or compensation process is ever allowed to occur, including the compensation claims and legal matters already documented publicly and privately. The pattern of obstruction, delay, reputational destruction, procedural exclusion, and denial of effective representation has now become inseparable from the broader evidence I allege demonstrates coordinated targeting and erasure.

Your email will be preserved as part of the permanent evidentiary archive connected to the public record surrounding Barran Dodger and Dr. Richard William McLean, including blockchain timestamping and digital archival systems intended to preserve institutional correspondence for historical, forensic, legal, and public analysis.

I reject the implication that generic referrals constitute meaningful protection in circumstances where the core allegation is that institutional systems themselves have participated in, enabled, ignored, or perpetuated the harm being reported.

At no stage did your correspondence materially address: the documented threats to my life, the allegations of systemic targeting and blacklisting, the inability to obtain effective legal protection, the forensic evidence I have already supplied, or the immediate risks associated with my current circumstances.

Instead, your response functionally redirects me back into the same structures I allege have failed to protect me repeatedly.

This correspondence will therefore stand as part of the ongoing record regarding institutional conduct, procedural obstruction, and the failure to provide meaningful intervention despite repeated notice of alleged danger and escalating harm.

Richard William McLean
