

Subject - Formal referral and request for independent investigation, preservation of evidence and reasoned determination

To: The appropriate independent oversight, integrity, law-enforcement or regulatory authority with jurisdiction to investigate alleged unlawful surveillance, communications interception, misuse of personal information and institutional misconduct

Subject: Formal referral and request for independent investigation, preservation of evidence and reasoned determination

Dear Officer / Commissioner / Registrar,

I write to formally refer matters that I believe warrant independent examination concerning alleged surveillance, investigation of my personal life and character, possible retaliation, possible misuse of information concerning my religious beliefs and ministry, possible fabrication or manipulation of allegations concerning me, and possible unauthorised interception or access to my communications and financial information.

I request that this correspondence be treated as a formal notification and request for independent assessment, rather than merely as general correspondence.

1. The distinction between my conduct, my remorse and the allegations concerning me

I consider it important that any investigation distinguish between any regrettable conduct on my part, my subsequent public acknowledgment and atonement for that conduct, and the separate allegations I make concerning the conduct of others toward me.

I have publicly acknowledged and expressed remorse for a regrettable action and have wished Debbie Morgan well. I do not regard wishing another person harm as equivalent to the conduct I allege occurred against me.

To the contrary, my position is that I have not wished Debbie Morgan harm, notwithstanding the profound consequences I say followed from her actions and from the subsequent institutional treatment of me.

I allege that I possess evidence indicating that Debbie Morgan was paid to fabricate or produce a false report concerning me. I further state that this allegation was independently represented to me as having been confirmed by Ben, an NDIS provider, and that I understand Ben was subsequently required to sign a non-disclosure agreement.

I do not present those matters as conclusively established merely because I have reported them. I ask that the underlying evidence be examined, including the alleged payment, the provenance and contents of the report, communications concerning its preparation or use, the circumstances surrounding the alleged NDA, and any evidence capable of confirming or disproving what I have been told.

I regard the alleged NDA as potentially significant because, depending upon its provenance and circumstances, it could potentially bear upon questions concerning information control, confidentiality, institutional knowledge and the circumstances in which relevant information was communicated or restricted. I do not claim that the existence of an NDA by itself establishes government or intelligence-agency involvement.

2. The alleged harm and its evidentiary significance

I further state that I was told that the harm allegedly being created by Debbie Morgan was backed by police. I understand that this was communicated to Ben.

Again, I ask that this be treated as an evidentiary proposition capable of verification rather than as an established fact.

If independent evidence establishes that allegations concerning me were deliberately fabricated, paid for, promoted or supported by authorities, that would be materially different from a situation in which an honest report was made and subsequently acted upon in good faith.

That distinction is fundamental.

My position is that the harm allegedly inflicted upon me, and the institutional responses to that harm, may themselves constitute evidence requiring examination, particularly if independent evidence demonstrates that the originating allegation was knowingly false or improperly manufactured.

I have experienced what I describe as decades of consequential police and institutional mistreatment arising from allegations concerning me. I do not ask an investigator to accept my characterisation of those events as established fact. I ask that the underlying chronology be examined to determine how the original allegations arose, what evidence supported them, what was subsequently relied upon, and whether later institutions simply inherited earlier propositions without independently testing their provenance.

I have consistently wished Debbie Morgan well despite the consequences I attribute to her actions. My grievance is directed at the alleged conduct and its consequences, not at a desire to cause her personal harm.

3. Publication of Recovered, Not Cured

This distinction is particularly relevant to the publication of my book, Recovered, Not Cured: A Journey Through Schizophrenia.

I publicly discussed aspects of my experience and the circumstances surrounding the book's publication. My position is that subsequent treatment of those matters may have involved a veiled exploitation of material I had publicly disclosed, potentially constructing or reinforcing a narrative in which I was positioned as the villain rather than as the person describing what I had experienced.

I ask that this proposition also be tested against the documentary chronology.

The relevant questions include what I actually published, what was subsequently alleged about me, whether later allegations corresponded with information contained in my published account, who had access to that information, and whether there is evidence of deliberate manipulation or reframing.

4. Tony Ridley and information concerning my private life

I state that Tony Ridley's apparent knowledge of matters concerning my former relationship with Alan Rigby and Debbie Morgan is significant and, in my view, warrants examination of the source, timing and circumstances through which that information was obtained.

I further allege that this knowledge may be consistent with an investigation or intelligence-gathering process concerning my personal life, relationships, character and activities. One possible motive requiring examination is retaliation connected with my publication of material concerning what I describe as a "honeypot" sexual encounter involving Mr Ridley.

I also ask that the investigation consider whether my faith in God, my online archive and my ministry became relevant to any attempt to characterise, discredit, humiliate or psychologically undermine me.

My Church of Barran Dodger archive and ministry are publicly accessible. I therefore consider it objectively possible to investigate whether information concerning my religious beliefs, writings, ministry or online activities was collected, analysed, circulated or used in constructing a narrative about me.

I specifically raise the possibility that my faith and religious identity were exploited as a means of framing or discrediting me, including through material presented to me or appearing online that I interpreted as attempts to ridicule, desecrate or undermine something I regard as sacred.

I do not claim that every such occurrence necessarily originated with Mr Ridley or any government agency. I ask instead that the source, authorship, timing, dissemination and purpose of relevant material be independently examined.

One statement I recall Mr Ridley making to me was:

"We have thought of everything."

I consider the context and timing of that statement potentially significant. I do not claim that those words alone establish surveillance or coordinated activity. Their evidentiary significance depends upon the surrounding circumstances and whether independent evidence can corroborate any connection between the statement and subsequent events.

5. Alleged government or intelligence connections

I state that I understand Mr Ridley to have served in the SAS and that I have understood him to have government connections or backing.

I do not present those matters as proof of government involvement in activity concerning me. If government involvement is alleged, I ask that the existence or absence of any actual institutional relationship, authorisation, funding, tasking, information-sharing arrangement or other connection be independently established.

6. Alleged communications and financial-account access

I further allege that my telephone and electronic communications may have been unlawfully intercepted or accessed, including communications or information associated with my Bendigo Bank accounts.

I do not presently have sufficient independent evidence to state as an established fact that Mr Ridley, or anyone acting on his behalf, intercepted those communications or accessed those accounts.

I therefore request technical and documentary examination rather than asking the recipient to accept my conclusion in advance.

7. Requested investigation

I respectfully request that the appropriate authority:

- 1. Register this correspondence as a formal notification or referral and provide a reference number.
- 2. Identify the officer, unit or organisation responsible for assessing the matters raised.
- 3. Determine jurisdiction and advise which aspects fall within the recipient's statutory or administrative functions.
- 4. Preserve relevant evidence, including correspondence, telecommunications records where lawfully obtainable, account-access records, device and authentication records, metadata, online publication records and other potentially relevant material.
- 5. Examine the provenance of information concerning Alan Rigby, Debbie Morgan, my personal life, relationships, faith, ministry and online archive that appeared to be known by persons who I did not understand to have legitimate access to it.
- 6. Examine the allegation concerning payment and fabrication of a report, including the alleged payment, the report's provenance, communications surrounding its preparation and any evidence capable of confirming or disproving the allegation.
- 7. Examine the alleged NDA involving Ben, including its provenance, parties, date, purpose and circumstances, while recognising that an NDA alone does not establish improper conduct.
- 8. Examine the alleged statement that police supported or backed the harm being caused, including whether any independent evidence corroborates that proposition.
- 9. Examine whether any surveillance, intelligence-gathering, character assessment or investigation concerning me occurred, and, if so, its source, purpose, authorisation and legal basis.
- 10. Assess the allegation of communications or financial-account access, including whether independent technical evidence supports or excludes unauthorised interception or access.
- 11. Examine the provenance of relevant online material, including the YouTube material I have identified, rather than assuming either that it originated from the persons I suspect or that it did not.
- 12. Examine whether my faith, ministry or religious expression was improperly used to construct a narrative concerning my character or credibility.
- 13. Examine whether information contained in or surrounding the publication of Recovered, Not Cured was subsequently exploited or reframed in a manner capable of being independently established.

14. Examine potential retaliation connected with my publication of material concerning Mr Ridley.
15. Identify and test competing explanations, including innocent or lawful explanations for the information or events I have described.
16. Provide a reasoned written determination identifying what has been established, what has not been established, what evidence was relied upon, what evidence was unavailable or inconclusive, and what further action, if any, is proposed.

8. Requested outcome

The outcome I seek is not a predetermined finding that my allegations are true.

I seek an independent process capable of determining whether they are true, false, partially supported, unsupported or presently incapable of determination.

Specifically, I request:

formal acknowledgment → registration/reference number → jurisdictional assessment → evidence preservation → independent investigation or referral to the proper authority → assessment of competing explanations → reasoned written findings → identification of any further action or review mechanism.

I am equally prepared for independent evidence to demonstrate that aspects of my interpretation were mistaken. What I am seeking is an evidentiary process in which that conclusion, if reached, is based upon identifiable evidence rather than assumption.

Likewise, if independent evidence establishes unauthorised surveillance, interception, misuse of information, fabrication, retaliation or improper targeting of my religious expression, I ask that those matters be dealt with according to the applicable law and regulatory framework.

The central questions are:

What information was obtained, how was it obtained, by whom, when, for what purpose, under what authority, and what independent evidence can establish or exclude each proposition?

I ask that this referral be retained as part of the official record and that I receive written acknowledgment and a reference number.

I request acknowledgment within 5 business days and a substantive jurisdictional or procedural response within 14 calendar days. If additional time is required, please advise me within that period, explain the reason for the delay and provide an anticipated response date.

My permanent documentary archive is available here:

The consolidated documentary material is also available here:

Permanent Google Drive document

I am preserving the record because I believe the questions of provenance, notice, response, independence and institutional reasoning may ultimately be as important as the underlying allegations themselves.

The appropriate response is neither automatic acceptance nor automatic dismissal.

The appropriate response is examination.

Yours sincerely,

Dr Richard William McLean
Barran Dodger
